Of this bird it is further related, that when his life drew to a close, he built a nest for himself in Arabia, to which he imparted the power of generation, so that after his death a new phoenix rose out of it. There are also some versions where the Phoenix completes its journey as described above from Paradise to Arabia and then Phoenicia and then dies with the rising of the sun the next morning.

However, unlike many other cultures who told of the Phoenix, the Firebird was It would then sing one of the most beautiful and haunting melodies known to man – so perfect that even the sun god had to pause and listen to the sweet notes. The fact that he would name it so suggests something about the importance of that mythical creature. Long-lived bird that is cyclically regenerated or reborn in Greek mythology.
