The Budget Enforcement Act of defines discretionary appropriations as budget authority provided in annual appropriation acts and the outlays derived from that authority, but it excludes appropriations for entitlements. The Administration has sought funding several times in recent years for consolidation of some of those other offices to fewer locations to save money on lease costs. Table 4. Like the House report, the Senate report continued to provide direction to both. While many of those modifications were simple date changes, one represented a significant change from previous practices. Apart from improving efficiency, ELIS also includes tools to combat fraud and identify national security concerns. The guidance advises agencies to cut information technology costs by 10 percent from the average for the agency.

Also, the reduced award amounts make a full, new round of applications for construction Corps. However, the specific amount is unknown.
