Volume 10 Issue 2 Summer Pages Nearly half the interviewees stated that Chinese employees focused largely on human relationships particularly with their supervisors and hierarchies, which was mostly evaluated neutrally and—in a small number of cases—was perceived positively.

Log into add to list. One should also take into account the Chinese concept of face. Auch sei bei der Bewertung jeweils an den Bildungshintergrund zu denken, der in China bekanntlich besonders stark variieren kann. This is probably one of the reasons why, in the aforementioned survey, the Chinese staff asked for more direct communication—some Germans tend to exaggerate indirectness in China.
