Start on. City At Night Painting. He hilariously documents his love-hate affair with coffee drawn with coffee on paper napkins, of course creates schematics of sleep positions, Clearly, Christoph Niemann's brain Abstract City differently than everyone else's, because he isn't just a designer or an artist blogging for the New York Times where he recently live-drew the running of the New York Marathon : His media include cookie dough, wires, Legos and even tiles check out the MTA map bathroom he created for Abstract City subway-obsessed kids.

It's literally a graphic novel-not a form of comics but a novel by a graphic designer. Are you sure you want to Yes No. Recommended by: Jasmin Aujla

There's no plot, only a series of illustrations, mostly inspired Abstract City New York, that take you through Christoph Niemann's thought process and experiences. Aside from the "I Lego N. The best stories are excellent, including the story of London Skyli
